

148 MINERS MISSING IN BUTTE DISASTER

Fifty Bodies Already Recovered Following Explosion and Fire.

(By International News Service.) Butte, Mont., June 19.—(AP)—Fifty bodies were recovered today from the wreckage of the North Butte mine, which was destroyed by a massive explosion and fire on June 17. The disaster, which killed 148 miners, was the worst in the history of the state. The mine, which had been in operation for over 50 years, was a deep-shaft mine. The explosion, which was caused by a gas leak, was so powerful that it blew the mine's main shaft to pieces. The fire, which started in the mine's engine house, spread rapidly and consumed the entire mine. The bodies were recovered from the wreckage of the mine, which was a complete ruin. The mine's owner, the North Butte Mining Company, is now facing a federal grand jury indictment for negligence. The company's president, J. H. Smith, is also facing a federal grand jury indictment for negligence. The company's president, J. H. Smith, is also facing a federal grand jury indictment for negligence.
